

Indian Music

Indian music is made up of _____ key elements. The first is the _____. This can be heard all the way through a piece of Indian music. It can sound confusing as it is only two notes played at the same time. The drone is played by the _____.

The melody is the main part of a piece of Indian music. The melody is made up of notes of a raga. A _____ is a cross between a melody and a scale. There are lots of different ragas, such as morning, afternoon, evening and night ragas. Ragas are used to set the mood of the music. The raga is often played by the _____.

The rhythm is known as _____. Tala is a basic rhythmic pattern or _____ with many complicated patterns within it. The tala is played by the _____. The tabla is a pair of _____. The smaller, right hand drum is called the tabla. The larger, lower-sounding drum is called the baya.

A typical Indian piece is divided into _____ sections. It starts with the Alap, then the jhor, jhala and gat or bandish. There are no gaps between the different sections – each one flows into the next.

| | | | | |
|-------|-------|-------|-------|---------|
| tabla | sitar | drums | four | tambura |
| raga | three | drone | cycle | tala |

Indian Music

Indian music is made up of _____ key elements. The first is the _____. This can be heard all the way through a piece of Indian music. It can sound confusing as it is only two notes played at the same time. The drone is played by the _____.

The melody is the main part of a piece of Indian music. The melody is made up of notes of a raga. A _____ is a cross between a melody and a scale. There are lots of different ragas, such as morning, afternoon, evening and night ragas. Ragas are used to set the mood of the music. The raga is often played by the _____.

The rhythm is known as _____. Tala is a basic rhythmic pattern or _____ with many complicated patterns within it. The tala is played by the _____. The tabla is a pair of _____. The smaller, right hand drum is called the tabla. The larger, lower-sounding drum is called the baya.

A typical Indian piece is divided into _____ sections. It starts with the Alap, then the jhor, jhala and gat or bandish. There are no gaps between the different sections – each one flows into the next.

| | | | | |
|-------|-------|-------|-------|---------|
| tabla | sitar | drums | four | tambura |
| raga | three | drone | cycle | tala |